

LIT LAB

The theory and research have been presented, discussed, and internalized. Strategies have been modeled, reviewed and processed. Assessments have been administered and the data has been collected, but questions remain like. . .

- How do I introduce the workshop model to my students?
- What routines and procedures should I establish with my students and how?
- How do I use the interest inventory and other informal assessments?
- How do I give up control as I release responsibility to my students?
- Should I really trust the model?

If you've successfully implemented the bits and pieces of the model, but long to facilitate a full-blown workshop classroom, Literacy Lab will provide you the extra support you need. Become rejuvenated as you revisit the reading and writing workshop experience not only as a teacher but also through a student's perspective. Come, be the student!

Registration is $50. Please fill out the form and mail both the check (payable to "Literacy Lab") and completed form to the address below. Register by July 1st. Call 501-279-4092 to cancel.

Completion of the first year of Literacy Lab is a prerequisite for this professional development opportunity.

Days One & Two

See the classroom, the centers, and the classroom library. Participate in three reading workshop lessons, two 90-minute lessons and one 50-minute period beginning with establishing procedures to ensure success from the first day of school. Experience two more 90-minute blocks and one 50-minute lesson on writing workshop. Nurture your confidence in the comprehensive literacy approach as you learn how to engage students as writers and how to continue to motivate them to be successful writers throughout the year. Time will be allotted for debriefing, questions, and concerns as you collaborate with other educators.
